

7.11 B puzzle

Across

3. The animal instinct for food storage is an important biological adaptation; it is most highly developed in inhabitants of cold and temperate latitudes with severe seasonal changes in food conditions. It is observed in many invertebrates (predominantly insects), in some birds, and particularly often in mammals.

5. a system produces in response to a particular circumstance. It may be induced by stimuli or inputs from the environment whether internal or external, conscious or subconscious, overt or covert, and voluntary or involuntary.

6. a group of living organisms consisting of similar individuals capable of exchanging genes or interbreeding.

8. seasonal movement of animals from one region to another.

9. the condition or period of an animal or plant spending the winter in a dormant state.

10. the outside; outer surface; exterior. something that is external. externals, external features, circumstances, etc.; outward appearance; superficialities.

Down

1. the way in which a living organism or bodily part functions.

2. a particular section, group, or type of people or animals living in an area or country

4. a different or distinct form or version of something.

7. to stay alive and safe