

Activity B: Option 1

Across

4. What is the process by which an individual of one species kills a individual from another species?

8. The process were traits of a organism improve over time.

9. What relationship describes one species benifits and other is unaffected?

11. What is the process by which two species evolve in responce to changes in each other?

12. The process were humans select what traits are best for the envirnment

13. what is it called when scientist estimate that over 99% of all species that ever lived are dead?

Down

1. What is it called when species evolve to occupy only their niches?

2. What is the relationship in which oe organism depends on another?

3. What is the ability to survive and reproduce under changing envirnmental conditions?

5. The process where new species are formed

6. A term meaning "change over time".

7. What is a change is DNA

10. What describes a organisms use of resources and its funtional role in a community?