Across

2. The word is translated from the Greek pi'stis, primarily conveying the thought of confidence, trust, firm persuasion. Depending on the context, the Greek word may also be understood to mean "fidelity." Heb 11:1

6. A woman who heard Paul's defense at the Athenian Areopagus (Mars' Hill) and became a believer.

7. Son of Eliab of the tribe of Reuben and the brother of Abiram and Nemuel. He and Abiram supported the Levite Korah in his rebellion against the authority of Moses and Aaron and, in effect, challenged Jehovah's promises by referring to Egypt as the "land flowing with milk and honey."

9. The third and youngest daughter of Herod Agrippa I, born about 38 C.E.; sister of Agrippa II, Bernice, and Mariamne III. Her mother's name was Cypros. Before she was six years old, her marriage to prince Epiphanes of Commagene was arranged, but it never materialized because of the refusal of the groom-to-be to embrace Judaism Ac 24:24-27

11. A prophetess in Israel; the wife of Lappidoth. She dwelt under a palm tree located in the mountainous region of Ephraim between Ramah and Bethel; "the sons of Israel would go up to her for judgment."

13. The earliest fruits of a season; the first results or products of anything. The Hebrew word re'-shith (from a root meaning "head") is used in the sense of first part, point of departure, or "beginning" (De 11:12; Ge 1:1; 10:10); the "best"

14. An Areopagite, or judge of the Athenian Areopagus, who heard Paul's defense and became a Christian.

Down

1. David's second son, born to him at Hebron by Abigail. (1Ch 3:1) He is called Chileab at 2 Samuel 3:3. With the slaying of the firstborn, Amnon, he could feel in line for the kingship after David, but no mention is made of a usurpation, suggesting either that he respected the God-given appointment of Solomon or that he died before his father.

3. A son of Bani and one of the Jews who responded to Ezra's admonition by putting away their foreign wives and sons.—Ezr 10:34, 37, 44.

4. A hill to the NW of the towering Athenian Acropolis, separated from it by a shallow valley. This rather narrow, barren ridge of limestone is 113 m (370 ft) high, and the Acropolis to its SE rises another 43 m (141 ft) higher. On one of the apostle Paul's visits to Athens, certain Athenians laid hold of him and led him to this place, saying: "Can we get to know what this new teaching is which is spoken by you? For you are introducing some things that are strange to our ears."

5. Descendants of Simeon's son Jachin.—Ge 46:10; Nu 26:12.

8. A god of the Philistines. The existence of cities called "Beth-dagon" (likely named after this god)

10. The procurator of the Roman province of Judea who held Paul prisoner for two years after Paul's last visit to Jerusalem, in about 56 C.E. Act 24:10

12. A unit for measuring the depth of water. The unit is commonly viewed as being four cubits (c. 1.8 m; 6 ft) and approximately corresponds to the distance between the fingertips of a man's two hands when his arms are stretched in opposite directions. Appropriately, the Greek word for this (or-gui-a') comes from a root meaning "stretch out; reach." Acts 27:28
