

Analysis of a Text

Across

2. A type of text.

5. A way of accessing another website for further information about the topic you are learning.

8. A visual feature used to in informative texts to help create meaning and provoke emotion.

11. We create _____ from a text by using the visual, language and text structures.

12. A feature of a text that explains things such as chapters/layout.

13. A particular type of 'image' used in informative texts to emphasise a message.

16. A feature of a text that explains things such as illustrations.

18. Used on websites to inform you of the topic and usually includes a 'table of contents' or menu.

19. Words that express manner, place, time or degree.

20. A type of text.

21. These are used in some text types to break up information into appropriate sections.

Down

1. Often found in informative texts where there are unfamiliar words.

3. A text feature used to catch the readers eye - can often be bold or coloured.

4. A visual feature used in literary text types.

6. A feature of a text that explains things such as vocabulary.

7. These are used to inform you of the information to follow - usually found at the beginning of a chapter.

9. A type of word used to provoke sympathy from the reader.

10. You need to understand the _____ of a text to make meaning of it.

14. A feeling that is often created by the author by using emotive words and images.

15. Often used in a literary text type to emphasise actions.

17. The writer/creator of a text.