

Name: _____

Date: _____

CHAPTER 9

Across

3. Romantic relationships are interpersonal involvements in which the participants perceive the bond as romantic and are rooted in
5. Interpersonal communication is communication between two people in which the messages exchanged significantly impact their thoughts, emotions, behaviors, and
8. Family relationships are incredibly diverse and are constantly in
12. Workplace relationships are the affiliations you have with professional peers, supervisors, subordinates, or mentors, which vary along three
13. Emotional complexity explains how members of the same family typically experience both warm and antagonistic feelings toward one another at various
14. Circumscribing begins when one or both of you respond to problematic differences by ignoring them and spending less time
15. Multiple roles refers to how family members are constantly juggling multiple

18. Differentiating is the first stage of coming apart, when the beliefs, attitudes, and values that distinguish you from your partner come to dominate your thoughts and

19. Avoiding begins when one or both of you decide that you no longer can be around each other, and you begin distancing yourself

20. Friendship is a voluntary interpersonal relationship characterized by intimacy and

22. Impersonal communication, exchanges that have a negligible impact on your thoughts, emotions, behaviors and

23. Initiating is the stage when you size up a new person to decide whether you want to get to know that person

Down

1. Stagnating begins when the circumscribing becomes so severe that you and the other person have almost no safe topics you can talk about and communication slows to a
2. Experimenting stage begins when you exchange demographic information such as names, majors,

4. Interpersonal relationships are the emotional, mental, and physical involvements that you forge with others through

6. Integrating starts when you and your partner's personalities seem to blend, you both engage in activities and interests that clearly join you together as a couple, and use language expressing your new

7. Dyadic, involving pairs of people

9. Terminating is the ending of a relationship and occurs when the participants want to come together for a final encounter that gives a sense of closure and

10. Intensifying occurs when you and the other person begin to share much more personal information about

11. Liking is a feeling of affection and

16. Shared identity is often strong among family

17. Loving is a more intense emotional connection, consisting of intimacy, caring, and

21. Bonding is the ultimate stage of coming together and is a public ritual that announces to the world that you and your romantic partner have made a commitment to one