

Chapter 10: Childhood

Across

5. The assumption that others view the world as one does oneself
8. Simultaneous focusing on more than one dimension of a problem so that reversible thought becomes possible
10. Similarities in behavior among peers that stem from the fact that group members are almost the same age
13. Parents who impose few, if any, rules and who do not supervise their children
15. A membrane that permits the exchange of nutrients and waste products between mother and developing child
20. The turning of an infant's head toward a touch
21. The inclusion of a new event into an existing schema
24. An estrogen that has been linked to cancer in the reproductive organs of children of women who used it
25. The modification of schemas so that info inconsistent with existing schemas can be understood

27. Born before the end of the full term of gestation

30. Parents who rigid in their rules and who demand obedience for the sake of obedience

Down

1. The process of development as guided by the unfolding of the genetic code
2. A blood test that detects the presence of spina bifida and related abnormalities in the fetus
3. To focus one's attention
4. A scientist who studies the characteristic behavior patterns of species of animals
6. A procedure for examining fetal cells in the amniotic fluid to determine the presence of disorders in the fetus
7. Recognition that basic properties of substances remain the same when superficial features change
9. The belief that natural objects have been created by human beings
11. Parents who are strict and warm; use reason rather than force

12. Recognition that processes can be undone, and things can be made as they were

14. A newborn child

16. Present at birth

17. The virus that cripples the body's immune system and leads to AIDS

18. The belief that inanimate objects move because of will or spirit

19. Male sex hormones

22. Process in which an organism responds to a stimulus in a manner that will be difficult to modify

23. The enduring affectional tie that binds one person to another

26. A procedure for detecting disorders in the fetus based on examining placental tissue

28. A simple inborn response to a stimulus

29. A hormone used to maintain pregnancy that can cause masculinization of the fetus