

Name: _____

Date: _____

Chapter 28 Review

Across

3. Spread

5. A highly contagious bacterial infection that most often affects the lungs

9. A preparation based on a weakened or dead pathogen that provides immunity by causing the body to produce antibodies to the pathogen

11. The temporary immunity that an infant acquired from its mother

12. A serious inflammation of the lungs

13. Proteins that destroy or neutralize invading pathogens

15. The smallest known type of infectious agent

16. The body's natural defenses against infection

17. A bacterial infection of the throat

Down

1. A disease caused by organisms that enter and multiply within the human body

2. Organisms that live in or on another organism and derive nourishment from it

4. Immunity your body develops to protect you from disease

6. The process by which phagocytes engulf and destroy pathogens

7. The soft, ski like lining of many parts of the body

8. The chief type of phagocyte involved in the process of phagocytosis

10. German measles

14. A program whereby communities or other large populations are systematically made immune to a disease