

Chapter 2

Across

2. what are cultures that concentrate the power in the hands of a few called?
 3. a culture in which the power is evenly distributed throughout citizens.
 4. ____ is where people fosters a strong in-group affiliation with little respect to other cultures
 9. what refers to the biological and physiological qualities that characterize men and women?
 12. the tendency to see others through your own cultural filters
 13. what is it called when the values of a host culture becomes more and more a part of the immigrants culture?
 15. the feeling that you may live as you please

16. a commitment to the belief and philosophy of your culture.

17. ____ communication refers to communication between people of different cultures
 20. ____ is where people are treated as individuals, rather than group[s], and teach respect for other cultures

Down

1. what is the way people acknowledge and accept different cultures?
 5. a culture in which the information is known by all participants, but not explicitly stated in the verbal message
 6. a ____ culture values aggression, material success, and strength
 7. what is the process by which you learn the rules and norms of a culture different from your native culture?

8. a culture in which the communication is in the context or the person

10. a culture that teaches the importance of individual values
 11. a culture that stresses the importance of group values
 14. what is a fixed impression of a group of people?
 18. a ____ culture values modesty, tenderness, and concern for relationships
 19. what refers to the socially constructed roles society deems appropriate for males and females?