Chapter Five Crossword

Across

3. Assistive devices that can magnify a display supporting students with limited vision.

4. An Assistive device on a keyboard that allows student to press keys sequentially to execute functions that typically require pressing keys simultaniously.

7. Low-tech assistive devices that are acrylic or metal covers with holes for each key that is placed on a keyboard. The guards increase typing accuracy by allowing only one key at a time to be pressed.

9. Books and documents that have already been converted into or written for an electronic format

10. Assistive device, a keyboard that can be configured to an individual students needs.

11. Programs that can make an educated guess about the word a student is typing based on the first few letters. It can help reduce the number of keystrokes required.

12. A display that responds to human touch. Touch-screen software usually displays a series of graphics or icons. Rather than using a mouse or a pointer, the icon on the screen is touched.

13. The process of building bridges from prior knowledge as a baseline and moving students beyond that point.

Down

1. Assistive devices that offer a large surface area and larger keys than a standard keyboard for supporting students who lack fine motor skills.

2. An approach for gifted students that recognizes and targets instruction to the varying abilities found in the same classroom.

5. Can assist students who can understand material at their grade level when they hear it but have difficulty with decoding and comprehending when they read it.

6. Hardware and software that is designed or can be used to support the needs of exceptional students.

8. Assistive devices that support students with very poor vision or ones who become fatigued from screen magnification.

Word Bank

Digital Books

Recorded books

Touch Screen

Expanded keyboard

Customizable keyboards

Assistive technology

Sticky Keys

Screen magnification

Screen Readers

Differentiated instruction

Scaffolding

Word prediction software

Keyguards