

Coffee, Tea, and Caffeine Free

Across

3. The measurement in which caffeine is measured in.
5. This tea was originally made in China and hasn't gone through the same oxidation process as black tea.
7. Delicious drink commonly made from leaves and has many variations.
10. Delicious drink commonly made from beans (seeds) and has many variations.
11. Is used to make all kinds of coffee all around the world. It gets its name to its resemblance to true beans.

13. This drink is not only caffeine free but Calorie free too!

Down

1. This type of tea is considered the strongest (Flavor wise), and in other countries is known as a Red Tea.
2. A style of coffee made by adding water to a already prepared Espresso.
4. Another italian stlye of coffee, but is usually prepared with double espresso and hot milk.
6. You find this substance, some call it a drug, in many of your teas, and coffees. But water contains none of it.

8. This tea when brewed appears yellow. It also doesn't have a generally accepted definition.

9. Many teas are commonly prepared by pouring hot water on these. They also commonly grow on trees around us. However I do not recommon using them to make tea.
12. This italian style of coffee is made by forcing nearly boiling water through finely ground coffee beans.