Digital Video Production
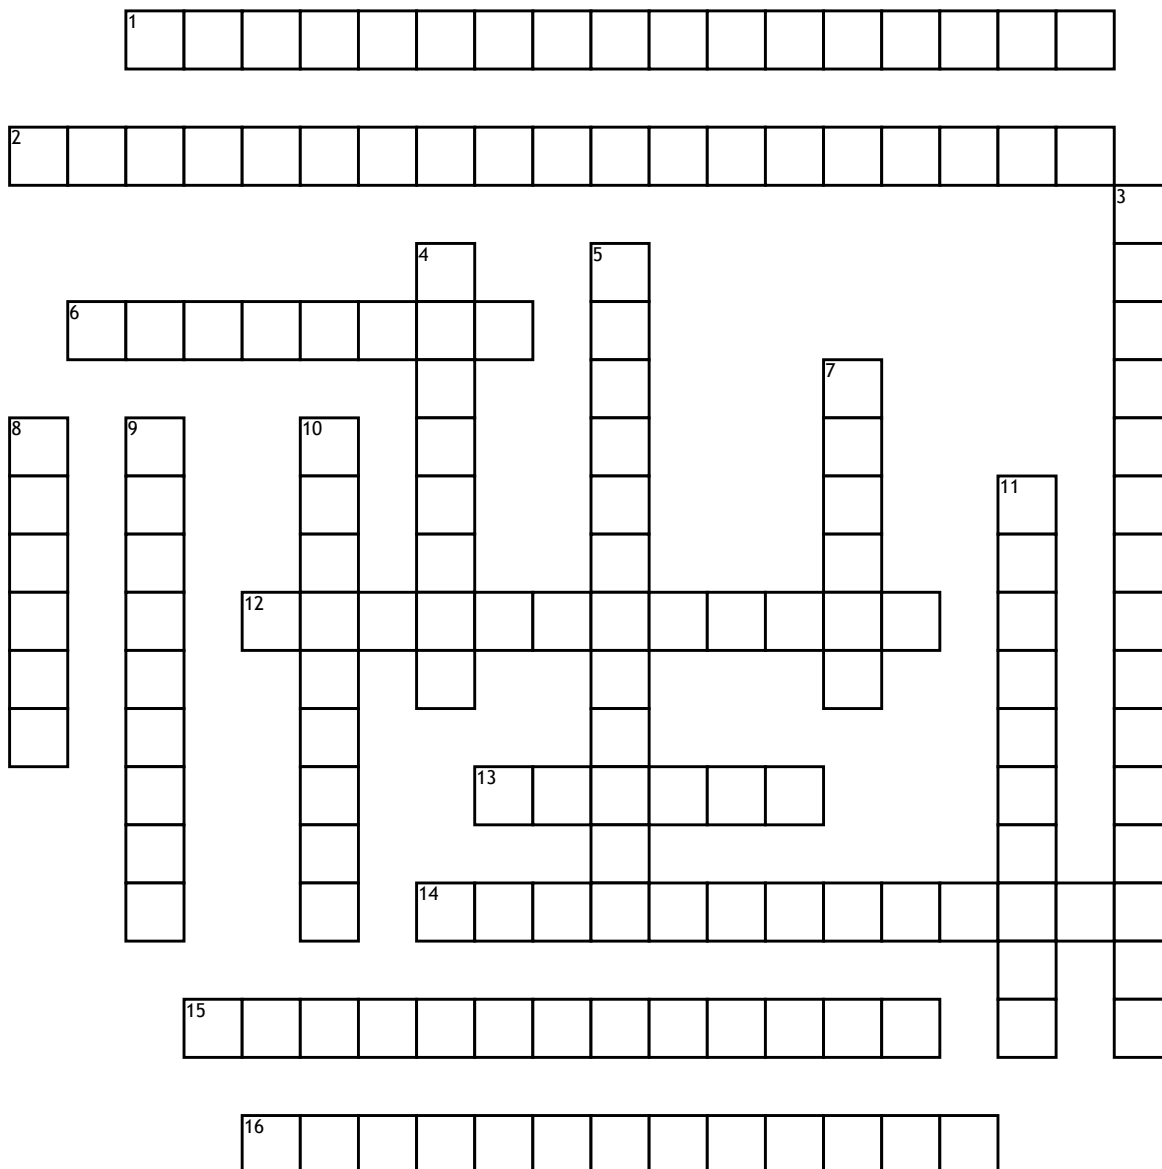

Across

1. The Technical Director has the daily responsibility for the technical operations of a theatre or performing arts center, including lighting, sound, set design and construction, and coordinating necessary maintenance.

2. when people argue about actions, events, ideas or policies, we care.

6. A journalist who gathers information - including researching and interviewing people - and writes news stories.

12. display device that prompts the person speaking with an electronic visual text of a speech or script

13. responsible for presenting stories on-camera, usually from a studio location though work can take place in the field

14. another name for a reporter, person who goes out and gets the news

15. People are interested in other people. Everyone has something to celebrate and something to complain about

16. designs and directs routines used in dances and performances.

Down

3. the person responsible for assigning roles in a film, play, or other production.

4. esponsible for the visual concept of a film, television or theatre production. They identify a design style for sets, locations, graphics, props, lighting, camera angles and costumes

5. takes all the elements of a newscast (packages, video, graphics, etc.) and compiles them into a show

7. responsible for the developing, writing, and revision of scripts, may create plotlines

8. person who performs on stage, another name for a person who is the main face the viewer may see on a newscast

9. Local information and events are newsworthy because they affect the people in our community and region. We care more about things that happen "close to home.

10. People are attracted to information that helps them make good decisions. If you like to cook, you find recipes relevant.

11. Immediate, current information and events are newsworthy because they have just recently occurred. It's news because it's "new."