

History Chapter 11

Across

11. a bodily need that arose from a deviation from optimal biological conditions
13. neo-neobehaviorism focuses on observation of over behavior but also returned to _____ processes.
17. Hulls four methods were simple observation, systematic controlled observation, _____ testing, and hypothetico-deductive
18. Hull thought of people as _____.
21. environmental stimuli, physiological drives, heredity, previous training, and age are the five causes of _____.
22. unobserved and inferred factors within the organism that are the actual determinants of behavior
23. Hulls learning theory focuses on the principle of _____.
24. Hulls method for establishing postulates from which experimentally testable conclusion can be deducted

Down

1. the Brelands used this kind of technique to make money training animals
2. this system of behaviorism contains objective study of behavior with the consideration of purposiveness or goal orientation in behavior
3. the doctrine that a physical concept must be defined in precise terms
4. the strength of the stimulus-response connection
5. when a stimulus-response relationship is followed by a reduction in a bodily need, the probability increases on the same stimulus evoking the same response, this is the law of _____
6. this theory created by Tolman and states that a repeated performance of a task strengthens the learned relationship between environmental cues and the organisms expectation
7. This stage of behaviorism includes the work of Bandura and Rotter

8. the 3 stages of behaviorism are neobehaviorism, neo-neobehaviorism, and _____.
9. this stage of behaviorism focuses on the study of learning, laws of conditioning, and operationism
10. the goal or operationism is to rid science of _____.
12. his system was purposive behaviorism
14. Established the IQ zoo
15. this psychologists had 4 different methods and was interested in artificial intelligence
16. Tolman the _____ man
19. neobehaviorism includes the work of Tolman, Hull, and _____.
20. Hull is very _____ and it is driving me away.