

Literature vocabulary

Across

4. to give a suggestion of something that will happen in the future of the story
 8. the point in the plot at which the action takes an unexpected direction (plot twist)
 10. when a relevant past event is brought up in the current time of a story
 12. the time, place, and conditions in which the action in a story takes place
 14. when the conflict in a story gets more intense
 15. a section or speech at the end of a book or play that serves to conclude the story
 16. the conversation between characters
 17. the angle in which a story is narrated point of

19. the first stage of a plot, in which the necessary background information is provided
 20. language used by a writer that causes the reader to imagine pictures of details within the story
 22. a character in a story whose purpose is to bring out in certain characteristics in other characters
 23. the person or character explaining and telling the story
 24. when the reader becomes aware of something within a story that the characters themselves do not know of
 25. the means by which writers present and reveal a character

Down

1. the category a work of literature may fall under

2. the extent to which a story imitates real life
 3. the act of resolving a conflict or problem in a story
 5. words that imitate a natural sound
 6. a subordinate plot in fiction that coexists with the main plot
 7. the principal or main character in a literary work
 9. a character or force against which the protagonist struggles with
 11. the turning point of the action in the plot of a story
 13. the final outcome of the story that comes after the climax
 18. a reoccurring object, issue, or theme in a story
 21. a separate introductory section of a literary work