

Name: _____

Date: _____

MOD 120/1

- |  |                           |
|--|---------------------------|
| 1. reach created by vertical sweep of the forearm while the elbow is kept at midtorso level.                           | A. upright position       |
| 2. adaptation of work environment and tasks to the human body  | B. expanded functions     |
| 3. pain associated with continued flexion and extension of the wrist   | C. operating zone         |
| 4. injuries caused by extreme stretching of muscles or ligaments   | D. carpal tunnel syndrome |
| 5. vertical seated position in which the back of the dental chair is upright at a 90- degree angle                     | E. sprain                 |
| 6. injuries caused by sudden twisting or wrenching of a joint with stretching or tearing of ligaments                  | F. rheostat               |
| 7. supervision is overseeing an assistant's work by working in the immediate area                                      | G. indirect               |
| 8. a foot controlled device used to operate dental hand-pieces   | H. ergonomics             |
| 9. specific intraoral function delegated to an auxiliary that requires advanced skill and training is referred to as   | I. maximum vertical reach |
| 10. the concept by which the face of a clock is used to position the dental team, equipment and supplies is called the | J. strains                |