

Safety at SCRMC

Across

2. at time of discharge, a complete list of these are generated for the patient's information or that of the next health care provider
4. built-in alarms to alert users about malfunctions, misconnections, patient status and more
7. one of the most common HFAs
10. a tool to aid the caregiver in gathering necessary information that needs to be relayed to another provider
13. decreases the spread of germs
14. use this to assess the patient's skin on admission, every shift, upon change in patient condition, upon transfer to another unit, or transfer to another facility for skin impairments
16. are never to be turned off, but may be silenced for a brief period while the issue is addressed

20. the means by which the patient's medications and how taken at home are verified and made available for the care provider to continue, modify or discontinue while the patient is in the hospital

22. this red-orange label is placed on malfunctioning equipment

Down

1. an acronym used to help nurses remember the high alert medications
3. these are no longer acceptable unless the prescriber is in an emergency situation or involved in a procedure
5. germs passed from patient to patient by staff members' hands
6. a headache from this is a side effect, not an allergy
8. patient's name, DOB, medication, dose route, frequency, & reason are components of an
9. verifies orders and checks against drug allergies and duplicate therapy

11. potassium of more than 40 mEq/L or NS of more than 0.9%

12. neuromuscular blocking agents

15. lengthens patient stay, costs more for their care, and frequently occurs because of a "staff" infection

17. infections are considered this if it occurs within 30 days of surgery

18. leads the list of healthcare associated conditions for patients, guests, and staff

19. meds that have a narrow margin of safety & can cause potential harm to patients if extreme caution is not taken

24. scanning the patient's armband & the medicines is the expected standard for all areas using the hand-held scanners at this