

Terms and Definations Living in Balance Session One

Across

2. What is it called when a person body becomes sensitive to a drug causing reactions like seizures?
5. What is the effect that a drug has on a person that takes a larger amount or longer time to feel the effect
6. what is the cycle when a person takes a depressant with a stimulant?
9. What substances change people's moods or feelings?
11. What is the term use to describe mood- altering substances that casues negative effects on a persons life?

Word Bank

Primary effect
Physical dependence
Drug switching
Upper downer
Cross Tolerance

13. When a person is sick or feels ill without a substance?
14. What protects people from seeing the harsh realities of their addiction?

Down

1. What is the process in which the same amount of a drug increase to have the same effect?
3. What is a natural ourring chemical in the brain that carries messages?
4. What occurs when two drugs have similar physical effects, one is often a substitiute for the other?

7. What happens when the body appears to be in balance only when the drug is present?

8. What occurs when a person replaces their primary drug with a secondary drug?

10. What is the effect that a drug has on a person shortly after the drug is taken?

12. What Is the primary, chronic, and progressive condition with genetic psychosocial and environment factors influencing its development and outcome.

reverse tolerance addiction
Substance Abuse Disorder
Psychoactive
Denial

Tolerance
Secondary effect
Neurotransmitters withdrawal