

Name: _____

Date: _____

Vocabulary Practice

Across

6. a type of energy resource that can be replaced.

9. a nonliving, naturally occurring solid that has its own regular arrangement of particles in it

10. statement of what you think will happen during an investigation

Down

1. a type of energy resource that cannot be replaced at all or cannot be replaced as fast as people use it

2. rocks formed inside Earth from other rocks under heat and pressure

3. rocks that form when melted rock cools and hardens

4. a process in which rocks are constantly being formed and destroyed

5. rocks that form when layers of materials and rock particles settle on top of each other and then harden

7. the study of a variety of reference materials about a subject

8. something you find out about objects, events, or living things by using your senses