

business buzzwords

Across

8. a date for a date

11. fairy dust and unicorn farts

12. an opportunity when someone is blowing it

13. how to make a wishful though happen

14. we use these to control how clusters happen

15. when you don't have enough time to actually solve a problem, you do this with the other responsible parties

16. we have no idea how we did it, but we don't want to admit that.

18. justification for why we're going to do something the way we want, even though it'll take longer, to protect future resources

19. frequent self-delusion that having someone in another country do unspecified work will be cheaper

Down

1. we avoid extra work by doing this with other contributors' status

2. when one doesn't want to get called out on the carpet, one suggests to

3. overused word, used for a range of scopes from reset-to-square-one to a bugfix, depending on political goals

4. what you don't want to hear in an elevator

5. what you do when you don't have enough resources

6. we use these to try to describe exactly how the next time won't be a cluster.

7. thanks! ...from a human resources system. ...on which you'll be paying tax.

9. one must be assigned to catch potential blame vectors

10. ...and then a miracle occurs...

17. helping ground someone in reality